WOOL MAKES NEW RECORD

Heavy Trade in National Lead-Largest Buying in Republic Steel.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.-With a few exceptions the highest prices today were made by 11 o'clock. During the second hour St. Paul was taken up and just before noon Woolen Goods added to its previous high record.

Shortly before 12 o'clock the whole market rallied again and the tone be-

The trading was marked by wild fluctuations in many of the industrials, which have been the leaders in activity in the last few days.

The most important movements were a gain in a number of the iron and steel shares cutside of the Steel Cor-poration, with Tennessee Coal and Iron. Republic Steel and Colorado Fuel the most prominent in this group. Tennes-see Coal and Iron, which sold at the opening at 125, advanced to 129. Colorado Fuel, which closed yesterday at 47%, advanced to 49%, while the Republic Steel stocks made gains of t

National Lead was also traded in on a huge scale. It made a rapid upward movement of 8 points, to 72½. At one time the crowd was so large in this stock and trading so wild that sales were made all the way from 68 to 10 in different parts of the crowd at the same instant, and one stop buying at 6914 could not be executed below 721/2. The largest buying orders were in Republic Steel. London traded in about 15,000 shares almost evenly divided be-tween purchases and sales.

Government bonds were unchanged; other bonds, strong.

when the interest flagged. Besides the dramatic excellence of the play, several specialties introduced by the Union Square Ouartet and unique clog dancing by Joe Miller aided materially in brightening the production.

The success of the play was not due to the special talent of any one actor, but to the general excellence of the cast. It is seidom that a company of such uniform excellence visits the popular playhouse. Will H. Vedder, as the boy detective, was good, but Harry LeVan, as his office boy, was better. S. S. Simpson in the dual role of the banker and the Eskimo executed the role with ease. Ethel Milton, as the female reporter, was the best of the women. some time, and is a decided change from the poor exhibitions which have been furnished recently. The second burlesque is especially good, the feature being the character of Louie Dupre as a landlady with a broque. In the olio are Vivian, a female baritone singer with a strong and pleasant voice: Cushman and St. Clair, in new songs and parodies; Herbert and Willing, in a blackface sketch, which is remarkable for having some real laughs; Louie Dupre, the Happy Girl, and Keno, Welsh and Montrose, acrobats, with old stuff done in an attractive style.

So says the management, and the character of Raffles in the play as compared with the portrayal made of him in the Hornung stories. Through the four acts of the play Mr. Bellew shows belle of Bath and the darling of the inceal presentation before one of the most brilliant audiences of the season. Every seat in the house was filled and genuine enthusiasm prevailed throughout the enactment.

By means of the love story running through the action he is afforded every proportunity for acting the part as that takes up the subject of American girls marrying titled foreigners, but without the unpleasant treatment of this long-discussed abject which so many dramatists have employed. His subject matter is a real love match between a prince of royal blood and an American girl. The pretty sentiment behind this attachment leads the prince to give up his throne for, as he says himself, he never did like "der king business."

Clyde Fitch is never wanting in ingenuity, and while he has no particular expression for this interesting attribute in "Her Great Match," there are naimerous little touches throughout the play which savor of the mind so pro-

MAJESTIC.

Her support is not brilliant, but fairly satisfactory. Charles Hammond as Lord Verney, the timid lover who later becomes the fearless champion of a wrongly suspected woman, is at his best when after throwing up his commission. Eugenie Blair scored a decided success at the Majestic Theater last night as Nancy Sykes in her ravival of Oliver Twist, Dickens' most realistic story of London low life.

Interest never lagged and from the beginning to the close of the performance the audience's attention was kept riveted on the trials and misfortunes of Oliver, the workhouse waif.

her brutal husband, Bill Sykes, which culminates in her horrible death in the garret, shows Miss Blair at her strongest. No one can follow her through this scene without feeling both sorrew and pity for the misguisted creature she represents. Edmund Elton acted and looked the part of brutal Bill Sykes, and throughout gave Miss Blair excellent support. This is particularly true of the murder scene, when he shows regulsion at his own brutal work and fees from the death garret for lack of physical courage to remain.

Miss Phyllis Sherwed made an excellent Oliver, Jefferson Osbourn, as Fagin, and George Leach as the Artful Dodger, gave excellent support throughout the performance.
